EMPLOYMENT

Wesleyan University, Middletown, CT

2017-present

Director of Academic Technology

As a member of the ITS Senior Leadership Team, supervise a team of six, including academic technologists and professional staff in Instructional Media Services, whose mission is to leverage technology and digital resources to support teaching, learning, and scholarship at Wesleyan University. Work collaboratively with the Center for Pedagogical Innovation, the Center for Faculty Career Development, and the University Libraries in support of academic excellence across the curriculum, as well as participate in policy and planning for infrastructure changes and implementation of University-wide applications. Administer an operational and capital budget for classroom technology, academic software, and professional development for staff that exceeds $1.5 million.

Grinnell College, Grinnell, IA

2015-2017

Associate Director of Academic Technology

Provided the strategic leadership and vision for the development of the digital liberal arts among faculty and students. Manager of the Digital Liberal Arts Collaborative (DLAC). Supervised a staff of three, including two digital liberal arts specialists and one instructional technologist. Developed and maintained strong working relationships with leaders of academic departments and offices across campus, facilitating collaboration and encouraging adoption of innovative digital resources. Worked with the Director of the Center for Teaching, Learning, & Assessment, the Director of Information Technology Services, the Librarian of the College, and the Office of the Dean to identify and develop strategic applications of digital liberal arts and academic technologies. Assisted with designing learning spaces that maximize the potential of digital academic technologies. Identified and pursued external sources of funding with the goal of expanding and enriching opportunities for the DLAC, faculty, and students.

Co-PI for Vivero: Digital Scholarship Student Fellows Program, a three year internally funded grant to establish a trained cohort of student fellows from traditionally underrepresented groups (women, students of color, LGBTQ students) to collaborate with faculty, students, and staff on digital liberal arts projects.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, MA

2014-2015

Communications Officer at HyperStudio

Collaborated in the development of a multimedia communications strategy for the lab to foster greater awareness among the digital humanities community of the lab's work and methods, in particular Annotation Studio. Served as the point person between users of Annotation Studio and the lab by creating resources for the Annotation Studio community including supporting videos and organizing user feedback to guide further development of the application. Taught digital humanities workshops and pedagogy sessions and offered individual consultations for both faculty and students. Researched funding opportunities and prepared grant applications. Spearheaded assessment efforts of Annotation Studio using a variety of assessment methods, including surveys, reflective writing pieces, and data collection to conducting multiple rounds of assessment in writing, literature, and foreign language classes.
